M. D. & W. H. M'HENRY.

M. D. & W. H. M'HENRY,
ATTORNEYS AND LAND AGENTS,
DES MOINES, IOWA.

PROPOSE to practice in the various Courts of Polk county, and in the Supreme Court of Iowa, and the United States District Court.
They have also established a General Agency for the transaction of all manner of business connected with Land Titles.
They will enter Lands, investigate Titles, buy and sell lands, and invest money on the best terms and on the best securities.
They will enter Lands in Kansas and Nebraska Territories, if an amount sufficient to justify a visit to that country is offered.

Any partner having been engaged extensively in the business of the law in the Courts of Kentucky for nearly thirty years, and the Junior having been engaged in the Land Business in Iowa for eight years past, during which time he has made actual survey of a large portion of Polk and adjoining counties, they feel confident they will be able to render a satisfactory account of all business entrusted to them.
They will enter Lands with Land Warrants or Money, upon actual inspection of the premises, and will buy and sell Lands on Commission, upon a careful investigation of Titles. Persons wishing to settle in the State can find desirable farms and city property for sale, by calling on them at their office in Sherman's Building, corner of Third street and Court Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

HON. J. J. CRITTENDEN.—Before this article appears the distinguished statesman whose name is at its head will have reached his home in this city. He will have returned to a home where all have virtues to love him for his many private and personal virtues, where even those who differ from him in politics have long admired him as a man of genius and esteemed him as a fellow-citizen. He will have returned with fresh laurels entwined around his brow, laurels more glorious than he had ever before won—laurels which not only attach honor to his own name, but which throw additional lustre over the fame of the State and the people who sent him to the national councils. He will have returned with the applause of a nation following his footsteps for his lofty contempt of sectional prejudices, and he will have been greeted by the people of his loved native State with expressions of renewed confidence and the warmest welcome. But the anthems which everywhere arise in praise of his patriotic efforts to give peace to the distracted country, to ally sectional agitation, and to bind the States together in bonds of love, will not be nearly so gratifying to his patriotic heart as the consciousness of having deserved them by his endeavors to do his whole duty to his country.

It will hardly be appropriate to attempt to give a sketch of Mr. Crittenden's political career to Kentuckians, among whom he was born, and before whom he has been a prominent actor for more than forty years. There has been no honor in the gift of the people of Kentucky which they have not delighted in bestowing upon him. He has been repeatedly elected to fill important places both in our State and national councils, from a seat in the lower branch of our State Legislature to a desk in the Senate chamber of the United States. He has been once Governor of Kentucky, and twice a member of the national Cabinet. He was placed in the Senate chamber at an age when ordinary men are just beginning to win a reputation among their fellow-mortals; but he trod the giddy height upon which he stood with an undazzled eye and an elastic limb. But his has not been a meteor-like reputation, he is no illustration of the class of men who have lived too long; the sun which dawned so beautifully is now, when he has passed the age usually allotted to man, more gloriously brilliant than ever, and the promise of his youth has been more than verified by the actions of his mature manhood. While corruption has stalked like a fell demon throughout the land, while it has been seen in high places and low places, staining the ermine of the judiciary, and insidiously gliding itself into executive mansions, there has never once been a single imputation uttered against the personal or political honor of Mr. Crittenden. The breath of calumny has never been cast upon his garments and none have dared for a moment to insinuate that pecuniary reward or lust of office could for a moment tempt him from the straight path of duty. While Congressional bullies and ruffians, urged on by executive influence, have, when worsted in argument, resorted to the foulest abuse and personal malignity towards other men, none have ever ventured to impugn the integrity of his motives.

Throughout his political career Mr. Crittenden's course has been characterized by conservatism. He promptly took sides with Clay and Jackson against the South Carolina Nullification movement. As a member of Mr. Fillmore's Cabinet he used all his influence to promote the passage of the Compromise acts of 1850, by which peace was restored to the country. He was born in a State which may justly be called the Keystone of the Federal arch, and his entire course has been such as becomes a Kentuckian. He has never gone to extremes upon any subject, with any party or section. He has been foremost in denouncing the incendiary spirit of Northern fanatics, but Southern fire-eaters and secessionists have also met with their share of reproof and merited rebuke. Ever ready to resist the encroachments of Abolitionism, he would fight with equal vigor against the Southern madman who would apply the torch to the Union. One of the firmest of Mr. Fillmore's supporters in his efforts to enforce the fugitive slave law in Massachusetts, he was also one of the first in denouncing the renewal of the agitation which the Compromise acts of 1850 had seemingly forever quieted a Kentuckian and, like the people whom he represents, in favor of fair play, he was the first to cry shame when Brooks struck down the unarmed and unguarded Sumner in the Senate chamber. Belonging neither to the North or South, but to the heart of the Union, his whole heart beats for the Union. He regards the enemy of the North as the enemy of his country, and he would ward off with his own corpse the blows aimed at the South. Mr. Crittenden has been consistent in his course, which has been dictated by the love of the Union alone. When two Senators, one from the North and the other from the South, declared that the day for compromise had passed, Mr. Crittenden vehemently proclaimed that he was in favor of compromise even to the last syllable of time;—not a compromise of principle or honor, but for each section to be patient with the faults, to recognize the virtues, and listen to the claims of the other. And, recently, when the Democratic party, under the dictation of a President elected by a minority of the people, violating the pledges given in their platform and in every conceivable manner by the President and his minions, attempted to force upon the people of Kansas a Constitution that they abhorred, not only on account of its provisions but because of the frauds perpetrated by the men who adopted it, and concerning which they had never been consulted;—and when the Republican party loudly advocated the rejection of the Constitution because it recognized the institution of slavery;—when this was the condition of affairs, and when both parties made threats of disunion unless their demands were complied with, Mr. Crittenden, belonging neither to the one nor the other, but to a party which has invariably rebuked the folly of both, promptly stepped forward and presented as a compromise and peace offering a substitute which proposed to obtain the fairly expressed will of the people of Kansas upon the Constitution in question, and to admit Kansas as a free or a slave State as her people might determine; and by his exertions he persuaded the Republican party to desert the dangerous ground which they had heretofore occupied, and to adopt the sound and conservative doctrine that the people of the States, unembarrassed by fraud or violence, shall determine what their own institutions shall be. Such was the construction given to, and such would have been the practical effect of the Crittenden substitute. It would have done equal and impartial justice to the people of both North and South, and to the people of distracted Kansas; it would have quieted agitation and proved a healing balm to the country; and, more than all, it would have placed the South upon the rock of justice and truth, from which all the storms of fanaticism and demagoguery could not have shaken her.

Such is the spirit of compromise of which Mr. Crittenden has ever been an advocate, and such is the man whom Kentuckians now honor. The moment he placed his foot on the soil of his native State he was greeted by crowds of his fellow-citizens with words of approbation and welcome upon their lips. He has come back to a State whose people regard him with increased confidence and love. He has come back from scenes in which he bore a hero's and a patriot's part. And he has come back to be among friends who know how to appreciate his motives, and to give expression to the veneration with which they now, more than ever, regard him. His name will be handed down to the future as the statesman who, in an age of politicians, dared to strike for the right, regardless of self or the clamor which might be raised against him. Blessed be the peace-maker.

Another Case.

The Democracy begin to wince under the exposure which George R. McKee is making of the various out of the way lotteries of the Democracy of the last Legislature. Somebody wrote to the Louisville Courier denying that the Clerks of the last House of Representatives were at all to blame for the fact that there is an act upon the statute book which was never passed by the Legislature, and laying all the blame upon the Clerks of the Senate. The case which this writer chooses to individualize from among the acts of delinquency is the bill for the benefit of the fine arts. It is well known here that this bill was enrolled by an employee of the Clerks of the House, and was signed by the Speaker of that body before it was brought up for action by the House. But as Democratic correspondents and editors choose to squabble over the matter we will pass it by, and give them another case which we have had in hand.

The House of Representatives passed a bill for the benefit of a Mr. L. Hoagland, of Bullitt county. The bill was then carried to the Senate and was rejected by that body. It was then returned to the House by the Clerk of the Senate, with notice that it had failed in the Senate, and was marked "disagreed to in Senate" on the back. Notwithstanding this, however, the bill was enrolled, was signed by the Speaker of the House, was sent by him to the Speaker of the Senate, who also signed it and sent it to the Governor for his approval; and the bill is now recorded as one of the acts of the last Legislature. Now we will not say that this bill was enrolled by the Clerks of the House, because we do not know their handwriting and we might be severely taken to task and taxed with falsehood by some editor or other. But we do say that it was their business to see that the bill was not enrolled and sent to the Speaker, and that they are responsible for the error. We say, farther, that it was enrolled by them or by their employees, and that they are responsible for the mistakes or carelessness of those to whom they entrust their business.

But it is very likely the entire blame for the transaction will be cast upon Sam. Sayre, because he permitted the Democratic Clerks or their employees to commit a grievous blunder, albeit he had nothing to do with and no supervision over this portion of the labors of the Clerks. Or, if it can't be shifted upon Sam's shoulders, why, we suppose, Mr. Lewis or Col. Hodges will have to bear it, because they chaptered and printed the bills just as they received them from the Clerks. It is quite probable that some editor or other will say, that Mr. Lewis was empowered to set aside the signatures of the Speakers of the two Houses and the approval of the Governor, and to refuse to chapter bills which were irregularly passed. But other persons will think that it was his business to chapter the bills which were given to him, and that it is for the judiciary to decide whether or not they are laws. The way some editors have of escaping responsibility on this subject must appear to every one with his eyes open to be merely a Yankee trick.

The Committee for the reception of Mr. Crittenden went to Lexington on Monday evening, having made arrangements for receiving him in Frankfort on his arrival on the 4 o'clock train. But he was so much wearied that he came to this city on the morning train, yesterday, and the demonstration was delayed until after supper.

A Washington dispatch to the Tribune states that circulars have been issued from that city, and distributed over the Union, urging Mr. Crittenden as the candidate for the Presidency irrespective of party or platform, and on the ground of his personal popularity with all the elements of the Opposition, and his acceptability to the Democracy.

From the Richmond Whig.

Mr. James B. Clay.

This poor man is making himself vastly ridiculous. He appears to have the respect of nobody, not even of the Loco-focos, who use him for their own purpose. A correspondent of a Philadelphia paper has the following concerning him:

"Mr. James B. Clay is very touchy and tenacious of his dignity, as though it were something of a superior order, and to be respected above that of his fellows. A day or two ago he asked to be excused from further service on the House committee on foreign affairs, because, forsooth, the House had appropriated to himself, and on the management of which he had hoped to make capital for his next Congressional canvass. "Much to his surprise and evident mortification the House acceded to his request, being probably of the opinion that the business of the nation would not suffer irretrievably if his eminent services. Only the next day, one of his friends moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby he was excused, his own suggestion, he having soon repeated that he was not finding that it would spite no one but himself. How an honest heart aches in contemplating the contrast between sire and son!"

We call particular attention to the following card from the senior class at the Military Institute. We have seen the pictures referred to, and can testify to their accuracy. They are gotten up in fine style, exhibiting very superior ability in the art. We would recommend those of our readers who wish a fine likeness to call on Mr. Griswold at once, as he leaves in a few days:

M. M. Griswold, Esq., of Columbus, Ohio:
Feeling truly grateful for the complete satisfaction given us, by Mr. Griswold, the skillful Columbus artist, whose name reached us long before we had the pleasure of his acquaintance, we tender him our most heartfelt thanks, and wish him that success and fame in his beautiful art, which his punctuality and artistic genius so highly merits. It is indeed seldom that we see the genuine character of a gentleman so happily united with the perfect profession as is clearly exemplified in the gifted Mr. Griswold, and we feel powerless to express the pure pleasure, of having one whom all must esteem, to represent so life-like the features of our loved classmates, who leave the walls of Old Alma Mater to face the storms and hurricanes upon the troubled sea of life. Wherever we roam and whatever be our destiny, the familiar faces of our classmates will be before us, while we will ever remember with grateful emotion, the scholar, the gentleman and the artist—Mr. Griswold.

MR. CHANDLER'S APPOINTMENT.—We find in the Washington correspondence of the New York Times, the following lucid and interesting explanations concerning the appointment of Hon. Jos. R. Chandler, as Minister at Naples:

"I cannot join in the eulogies passed upon Mr. Chandler as a politician, which, as appointment has elicited. He was for six years a Whig member of Congress. In 1854 he was dropped by the party in Philadelphia, and ran as an independent candidate, with the apparent purpose of causing the election of a Democrat. In this he failed. He remained ostensibly a Whig, however, until March, 1855. In the following year it began to be rumored that he was leaning towards Mr. Buchanan. He is a very zealous member of the Roman Catholic Church, and it is alleged, upon his own admission, that he had ever been before, his conversion is open to severe criticism, and may be referred to the loss of his seat in Congress. It has been suggested that his reputation as an 'Old Whig' commended him to Mr. Buchanan's favor. This is not probable, because one year ago, the chief of Pennsylvania old Whigism, Wm. B. Reed, gained a full mission to that country alone. Mr. Chandler is elevated as a reward for his election services."

LARGE SHIPMENTS.—It is astonishing to see the large amount of McLEAN'S STRENGTHENING CORDIAL that is shipped off daily to different parts of the country. It is scarcely three months since this article was first introduced, and now, judging from its rapid sale, it is known and appreciated all over the Western country.

Every druggist, dry goods or grocery merchant visiting our city should be sure to obtain a supply of this Cordial. It is just the thing required to strengthen and invigorate the weak and debilitated.—St. Louis Democrat.

We have received an account of the reception of Mr. Crittenden at Cincinnati and Covington, and will publish it in our next issue.

PACING RACE.—A pacing race came off Saturday, at the Oakland, near Louisville, between Richard Rousseau's white horse and Jos. Robb's pacer. Rousseau's pony came off triumphant in the two heats. Time—2:40, 2:45.

Mr. Daniel Heibler, of Paris, Ky., had his pocket picked of a pocket-book containing $600 in bills on Kentucky banks, principally in $100 notes, a note of hand for $5,012, and several smaller notes at a railroad depot in Baltimore on Friday.

We have been requested by Mr. PETER JETT to announce him a candidate for Assessor for the county of Franklin. March 17-te.

We are authorized to announce WILLIAM J. STEELE, Esq., as a candidate for the office of Presiding Judge of the Woodford County Court at the ensuing August election. Jan. 20—td.

JOHN E. RANK is the Agent for this Work in the counties of Franklin, Scott, and Bourbon.

From the many recommendations of this Work, we have only room for the following:

From Rev. Dr. Tappan, late President of Genesee College.

GENTLEMEN.—Having made a particular examination of Goodrich's "History of All Nations," I am free to say that I know of no work, great or small, that contains half the amount of useful and interesting matter for family reading. It is written in Mr. Goodrich's simple style. It is a library, a historical library of itself; and it is worth, according to the usual cost of good reading, two or three times the money you ask for it. It is no wonder that you have to keep a power press running constantly to supply the orders for these volumes; for the public have only to know their value to make them a universal want with all classes.

I am, gentlemen, most respectfully yours, B. F. TEFFT.

Extract from a Letter from Ex-President Fillmore.

I think it eminently deserving of the public patronage. It is necessarily brief, but it brings under review, with its admirable illustrations, the principal subjects worthy of attention in all nations, and to the young especially, it is invaluable. I have been familiar with Mr. Goodrich's writings for many years, and have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with him; and think him admirably qualified for imparting instruction in a way that brings it within the reach of the common mind.

MOSELEY'S TUBULAR WROUGHT IRON

ARCH BRIDGES AND ROOFS.

THESE Bridges and Roofs have now been fully tested in this vicinity, and it is universally conceded that they cannot be equalled by any other mode of building Wrought Iron, or mixture of Wood and Iron. They always last.

The Bridges are wholly Wrought Iron except the floor, which is wood, like the floors of ordinary Bridges.

We are prepared to make these structures in any quantities, at prices about as follows: Railroad Bridges, 50 feet span, 8,000 lbs., $17 50 per foot lineal. Common Road or Turnpike, 50 feet span, 2,000 lbs., $7 75 per foot lineal.

Roofs, all iron, 50 feet width of building, $25 per 100 square feet, 50 width and part iron, from $12 to $20 per square.

Increase of span of bridges or width of buildings makes an increase of price, but the increase in price is no more than the increase of wooden structures.

We can furnish iron of every size to work into Bridges and Roofs, and Railroads or other companies buying the right to use them and the iron of us, can make their own structures one third less than the above prices. Our structures weigh only from 1-4 to 1-10 that of wood; difference in freight in a long distance buys our iron. In a few days we will have at hand a call, as all our work is warranted, and we ask no pay on ordinary jobs until the work is done and approved, payments being secured on contracting.
